V. OLD BUSINESS

Chair Barbara Edgar opened the discussion on the criteria for historical designation. She compared Islamorada's criteria with those used in Key West, noting their similarities. Barbara suggested that the Village consider adopting more flexible guidelines, since local designation does not require state or federal approval. She felt this could encourage more property owners to pursue designation. The group will continue reviewing potential revisions to the Village Code language.

Commission member Roland Moore reported on his recent conversations with Corey Malcom of the Florida Keys History Center, as well as with Village staff members Peter Frezza, Environmental Resources Manager, and Emily Rother, Cultural Arts Coordinator. Roland expressed particular interest in his discussion with Emily and recommended inviting her to an upcoming meeting to share more about her role and the intersection of art and history within the Village.

Roland also encouraged the group to visit the Florida Keys History Center to meet with Corey and to explore the Art History section of the Key West Library for research on Islamorada's history, including identifying historical figures and photographs.

Megan Scallan proposed using social media to raise awareness about historic sites and their stories. This idea will be explored further.

The group also discussed the planned draft letter but agreed that, before moving forward, the priority over the next few months should be identifying potential historical sites of interest and reviewing changes to the Village Code. Any revisions would require a public hearing and approval by the Village Council.

The next meeting is scheduled for January 21st, 2025.
